

First, it was never a film,
then it wasn't a musical...
now IT IS a book.

From the author of Broken eggshells comes Christian Cook's debut novel...

Broken Eggshells

Already being described as "some book he's writing" by those around him, Broken eggshells is explained by its author as a black comedy in several hues of yellow and centres around 90's London in Clerkenwell.

At the end of an alleyway a dark blue Jaguar is found neatly parked into an inconveniently placed brick wall. There is no sign of the driver or any clue as to who they were.

Meanwhile, a group of cynics who are fed up with how futile the world has become decide to pay back society in a series of the most bizarre and pointless terrorist attacks ever (by placing large amounts of explosives in the middle of desolate unpopulated areas).

The world's media attempt to discover if there is any link between these two incidents, or a link between any of a number of random incidents they overheard being discussed down the pub at lunchtime.

Further details of the book can be found on the official website at www.brokeneggshells.com.

The author can be contacted by phoning 07752 882437 or by e-mailing ccc@brokeneggshells.com - further press and marketing resources will be added online at <http://media.brokeneggshells.com>.

The website contains a vast array of information supporting the book and encouraging discussion and interaction between readers. The plot of the book itself raises various questions and is riddled with numerous hidden tangents to be discovered and solved.

Broken eggshells is now available for purchase and is published by iUniverse.com.

The title is currently available from iUniverse.com, Barnes & Noble and Borders and will soon be appearing on Amazon and Books a Million. Further stockists will be announced at <http://buy.brokeneggshells.com> as negotiations are finalised.

A 'viral' marketing campaign will be launched in early March at ifoundaduck.com which will raise the profile of the title on a national scale and could lead to global coverage. Exclusive advertising space has also been secured on the CD cover of Farfield's forthcoming 'Dust and Glass' album. This deal will be finalised in a banner ad swap with ambient-music.com.

Christian was born in 1974.

Everything since then has all been a bit of a blur. This is his first novel,
and things should
get a lot less blurry
